Laser ablation of the saphenous vein involves using laser-tipped probes to produce photothermal effects in the vein. In this study we consider the effects of laser-induced thermal heating and conduction on the vein wall. We formulate and solve the relevant two-dimensional heat conduction problem. The solution resolves an aspect of a controversy involving the physiological mechanism of the procedure. (Received September 22, 2011)