Many departments struggle with how to make assessment meaningful for their faculty members. At Shippensburg we have a robust assessment program for our math major, and we use assessment data to inform curriculum decisions. I will discuss how the program was developed and how the data we collect help us improve both the curriculum and the assessment program itself. (Received September 24, 2012)