Fregier’s Theorem states that if from a point P on a conic any two perpendicular lines are drawn cutting the conic in points Q and R, then line QR meets the normal at P at a fixed point P’. This talk presents a traditional older proof of the theorem and looks at the locus of P’, and what happens when this process is iterated both forwards and backwards. (Received September 07, 2012)