It is important to foster creativity in undergraduate mathematics courses to help students fully understand and embrace concepts. I will discuss two activities I have used when teaching Calculus III that incorporate modeling with play dough and designing objects like dumpsters. (Received September 17, 2019)