In order to successfully apply concepts learned in Business Calculus to future business-focused courses, students must possess pre-requisite computational skills. This discussion will examine pre-requisite courses at universities across the country, and will also assess student success rates at the University of Tampa. (Received September 12, 2019)