Sgraffito is a technique whereby differently colored layers of some material, such as plaster or paint, are overlaid, and then an etching tool is used to reveal colors in layers underneath the surface. This process may be digitally simulated and used to posterize images. Details of the simulation will be presented; the simulation is written in Processing, and will be made available to participants. (Received September 17, 2019)