Images are the most effective medium of human communication and when processed under the control of students and teachers, they put mathematical ideas in an exciting new light. In this talk, I will show how to represent colors mathematically and how to deal with a color space as a vector space. This concept can be incorporated as a practical and interesting problem in mathematics courses. (Received September 16, 2019)