This talk will detail assignments and activities given in two sections of Calculus I in Fall 2016, totaling more than 50 students. Some activities have been used previously, but tweaked due to feedback and others were newly developed for this semester. The presentation will provide the prompts, worksheets, or assignments and samples of student responses. Anecdotal evidence of success or failure will be given along with discussion of how the materials will be changed in the future. (Received September 19, 2016)
